175+ Years of History

For more than a century, Victoria Ward and her family were stewards of this land, maintaining a peaceful sanctuary between Honolulu and Waikīkī. In 2010, Howard Hughes assumed responsibility of Ward Village, building on Victoria Ward's legacy and continuing her mission of creating a neighborhood and gathering place that embraces all.

The Neighborhood

Ward Village is home to a collection of modern residences, one-of-a-kind boutiques, global cuisine, an array of services, and abundant green space. This dynamic neighborhood is also woven with expansive parks, shaded tree-lined sidewalks, and pedestrian and bike-friendly paths for all to enjoy.

VICTORIA WARD PARK

A central gathering space at Ward Village, Victoria Ward Park is where residents and visitors alike come to lounge, exercise, play, and more. Named in honor of Victoria Ward, and featuring 3.5 acres of lush grass, native plants, and a grove of coconut trees reminiscent of the original Ward Estate, the park plays host to ongoing community events, including live Hawaiian music, hula, and holiday activations. The green spaces, as well as the surrounding beaches and parks, connect residents and visitors to nature and enhance city living.

NEIGHBORHOOD ART

Linda Fleming, "Wayfinding"

Arik Levy, "Mauna Vortex"

The array of installations, sculptures, and murals enhances the streetscapes and inspires residents and the larger community daily. Each residence also features its own unique collection of artwork.
